

Proposal Update

Modification in the expectations of the client

After having completed more than 3 weeks of data modelling and preprocessing, we agreed with our client to modify the expectations/scope of the project. In fact, we decided to shift our focus from extracting pin contact readings from the unsuccessful readings to forming clusters of similar waveforms and characterizing them using various metrics. They no longer expect us to have a pipeline that identifies the pin contact readings.

Our client has mentioned numerous times that this is an exploratory process. They have never analyzed the data contained in the waveforms, and they are more interested in our preprocessing steps as well as the design decisions we make as we learn more about the data.